

The European Journal of Analytic Philosophy publishes miscellaneous volumes as well as monographic volumes. Monographic volumes are intended to provide a forum for topics at the core of current philosophical debates.

This volume is the first monographic issue and collects articles on the philosophy and psychology of emotions by prominent scholars in the field.

The Editors would like to warmly thank our Guest-Editors Professors Katalin Farkas (Central European University, Budapest) and Judit Szalai (Hungarian Academy of Sciences) for their wonderful contribution.